Course Topic: Clinical Applications of Divergent Channels

Presenter: Jeffrey Yuen comes from two Daoist traditions and his training in Chinese medicine comes from Daoist priest Yu Wen and Gong Song-Liu. Yuen comes directly from a Daoist lineage and trained under the Daoist priest, Yuen, learning among other healing arts, Chinese herbal medicine. Yuen was invited by NCCAOM to be among a group of prominent practitioners, to write and review questions during the development of the NCCAOM herbal exam and served on their Finalization Committee

Program Description: Jing Bie/Channel Divergences are among the channel systems of Chinese acupuncture that reflect the mechanism of the body to divert pathogenic factors that have overwhelmed the body into subacute or dormant states. As channels that penetrate into joints and articulations, these meridians can impact the jing-essence and the qi-curious bowels. Since the pathogens are not fully released, the body continues either periodically or actively attempt towards resolution with flare-ups or progressive inflammation. Often misunderstood or deemed as an auto-immune process by Western medicine, the overuse of steroidal medication simply offers some relief by inducing latency or remission but such management does not provide viable resolution to their recurrence. Interestingly, a number of confluent points of the divergent channels are located at major lymph nodes of the body. This seminar will examine the physiology of the divergent channels, the implications of their trajectories, and their clinical applications for a host of medical conditions, especially pertaining to auto-immune conditions. Participants will learn to fine tune their diagnostics of the divergent channels and how to integrate them into their repertoire of acupuncture channels. In addition, clinical use of these channels will be demonstrated to provide practicality and subtleties for the practitioner, including the use of herbs and other modalities of Chinese medicine.
